

NEXT announces new Environmental Operations Director

Stephen Hall has been appointed Environmental Operations Director for NEXT, and will take up the role in October. Stephen has over 20 years experience in the natural resource management sector with extensive experience in biodiversity, pest management and land and water operations. He has worked as a consultant and for the last 13 years held executive management positions within regional councils throughout New Zealand, most recently the Director of Operations at Taranaki Regional Council. Stephen has led a diverse range of leading edge and high profile resource management initiatives.

Stephen will provide leadership and oversight to operational aspects of NEXT's portfolio of environmental restoration projects.

"I am excited about this opportunity to think big, operate at scale on leading edge projects with amazing people, to secure the health of New Zealand's unique environments and ultimately the wellbeing of future generation,"he says.
